

Good Morning Friends,

July 28, 2013

This week we saw a sharp up move of about 5 percent in last two days. In whole month we slipped only 2.6 percent but volatility was extremely high. Some stocks slipped more than 20 percent in single day which hurts investor's sentiments a lot. In most of trading session, Nifty did not hold their day gain and sharp down fall came in last session. Major down fall came from banking, metal and power sector which represent MIDCAP and small caps.

As per our observation, July month will be more volatile than previous month and month on month movement will be more than 10 percent. Here we published July first half forecast with this mail.

According to us, Nifty will trade in range of 5660-5870 in July first weeks where we are expecting first 3 day will be RED than will comes again in green zone and weekly closing will seem flat to positive nods. July 2nd week will be positive for indexes and we can see 3 to 4 percent up move during the week. Movement will be sharp. In other way, we can say that July first 2 weeks will be large caps week. Large cap share can surprise with some unexpected up move.

My motivation to run this advisory service is produce best research for client so they can trade with confidence and earn money with proper guidance.

Nifty Punch's vision is avoiding a single risky trade where we can lose money rather than we can earn money.

We sincerely value your subscriptions and support.

Thank you.

Warm Regards,
